

Welcome to Symphony Showhouse XIII

As with all remodeling projects, things get worse before they get better.

Our head designer, Victoria Flores making plans for the future of this room.

Tomato bisque faux finish wallpaper surrounds panels of Tuscan paisley tapestry wallcovering.

East windows and wall of the master bedroom.

THE STUDIO
AT
Accent Interiors

Symphony Showhouse XIII, at 205 North Roosevelt, was built in 1921 in a modified Italian style. The very first Decorators' Showhouse was held there in 1979. The current owners, Tena and Ken Stoppel, are returning the house to its original splendor with the help of more than 30 designers. Accent Interiors' designers were asked to take on the master bedroom.

Rich, sensuous, and Olde World is what the Stoppels wanted. Turning a 600 square foot room into a cozy retreat for a busy modern couple is what they needed. We hope you enjoy how our designers used wallcoverings and fabrics in rich colors, patterns, and textures to create a luxuriant, relaxing, and functional room.

